FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Many years ago, in a breed seminar conducted by the Philippines' foremost Pomeranian breeder, Mr. Basilio Yap of Canton fame, I remember him saying that the Pomeranian in the show ring is an illusion due to the magic that skilled grooming can do to transform even an ordinary dog.

His words have considerable truth to it as a large portion of the judging process is visual where a particular dog's outline is compared to an ideal pattern dictated by the standard for the breed. An exhibitor grooming his dog for a dog show can therefore attempt through ingenious grooming techniques to approximate the major features of the ideal outline. To the extent that he can accomplish this while grooming his dog, especially for coated breed which give much leeway for the groomer, the bigger the chance that his dog will get the approval of the judge.

Through the years, the skills and techniques of groomers have been improving especially with the help of modern equipment and grooming products. Both show dogs as well as pampered pets have benefitted from this development. Further, the professionalization of grooming in our neighboring countries, a trend that may rub on us very soon, augurs well for the overall well being of our beloved companions.

Who would not want to be with a perfectly groomed pet, especially in an urban environment? In such a situation, our doggie companion becomes our pride and joy.

COVER STORY

MUGEN POMS BELIEVE IN DREAMS

PH HOF / INT CH / MBIS / MBISS / MBPBIS

Many dream of having their champions, and only a handful of those will shine and become Best in Show Winners.

After my local multi- titled Poms, Prince and Margaux were in the Top Ten Dogs of the Year and top Pomeranians for two consecutive years, we were not sure if the next top Pom would fit the mold.

Many never believed that a small, scruffy boy who was an ugly duckling as a puppy would make it big. It was with a breeder mom's own belief in knowing that he had it in him that I showed and handled King David, believing in his excellent lines, and looking beyond his sparse coat. His first show in Cebu got him his first taste of a BOB and a Group placement from the classes. When I handled him again in another show, he won another BOB, Group 2, and a Best Philippine Born in Show under Judge Dr. Jose Mendiola. This started my team's focus on him when before, he was just an afterthought.

King David made his presence felt thereafter, consistently winning the Breed and the Group. He also notched a Best in Show win, putting him 3rd top Pomeranian in his first months of showing, behind my homebred Margaux who was on top. The following year and the next 2 years, he was ranked as top Pomeranian, and the top 4th, 5th, and 6th in the Dog of the Year All Breed Rankings, a PCCI record.

I will never forget the Circuit Shows held at SM Megamall, where King David made me and the entire Filipino audience proud by earning two highly coveted All Breed Best in Show wins in a contest highly dominated by top canine entries from different parts of the globe. He won more than half the Breed competitions, Group placements, and Best Philippine Born in Group and in Show wins. A local Pomeranian strutting his stuff and shining brightly amidst the beautiful Goliaths!

It's every breeder's dream to produce a BIS winner. My King David did more than make me the proudest Pom mommy. He's also proving to be a very good producer, too.

My King David, Mugen Poms Believe in Dreams, is a dream come true!

Could Grooming Competitions Be The Next Big Canine Fad In The Philippines?

By Fred Salud

Something is developing slowly but persistently in the Asian region that has mostly escaped the radar of local dog aficionados: Dog Grooming Competitions.

Dog grooming traces its roots originally to the need to trim dog coats to allow them to better function as hunting or working dogs, to ease the task of keeping companion animals clean and tidy, or to showcase fashion fads or dog owners' creativity. Later on, with the increasing popularity of dog showing, the need for greater expertise in grooming dogs for shows added fuel to the faster growth of the professional grooming industry. With the professionalization came the increasing popularity of dog grooming competition.

Though Western in origin, it has seen tremendous growth in interest among dog fanciers and organizations in a number of countries in Asia where it has spawned professional careers and numerous small to medium sized businesses. Likewise, the growth in interest has also resulted to dog grooming being refined to a very competitive sport.

The Philippines has seen numerous grooming salons being set up to cater to the grooming needs of dogs mostly for keeping them neat and tidy. However, very few of these grooming salons cater to the show grooming needs of exhibition dogs that up until this time remain in the hands of dog show owners or their trusted assistants. This is easily proven with the low popularity of poodles and Bichon Frise, two of the most grooming-intensive breeds in the show ring as there seem to be a direct relationship between the state of professional grooming and the number of these breeds entries in the show ring.

The grooming tables neatly arranged just before the start of an examination. An examination session for C class can have close to 300 examinees while that for B class have less.

One would be lucky to see even a single poodle or bichon in a regular PCCI show. In contrast, poodles represent a major breed, entry-wise in most countries where grooming has already been professionalized. It is not really surprising for potential poodle exhibitors to be disappointed with their show dog which when not properly groomed will most likely be overlooked by dog show judges, especially in keen Best in Group competition.

Poodles used to be in the top five breeds, registration wise, in the country years back. Their popularity has since waned which is very sad considering that this is one breed that should benefit from the changing demographics of the fast-growing cities in the Philippines. More people prefer smaller dogs that can be kept in apartments, small homes or condominium units. Toy and Miniature Poodle varieties, (both small varieties) fit this description. In addition to being one of the most intelligent breeds and with an added bonus of naturally having non-shedding coat, there should be more poodle puppies being registered. Unfortunately, this is not the present situation. Hopefully, the future will be brighter.

Japan was possibly the first Asian country that professionalized dog grooming after having been exposed in the 1950's and the 1960's to the American dog show scene. With over half a century of deep interest in purebred dogs and dog showing, and the love of the Japanese for cleanliness, precision, beauty, efficiency and professionalism, it should not come as a surprise that many dog grooming professionals in countries such as Taiwan, Malaysia, Singapore, and China first looked at the Japanese system when they started developing their respective dog grooming systems. Also, up to now, most major grooming competitions in these countries rely on Japanese grooming masters to act as competition judges.

Grooming competitions in Asian countries exist side by side with formal grooming schools and skills level certification or licensing. These grooming schools actually form the backbone of the certification process and continuously supply the competition events with numerous contestants sourced from their students with varying levels of expertise.

The training process for an aspiring professional groomer requires considerable financial resources as well as commitment of personal time similar to other formal skills development courses.

Take the case of Taiwan. There, a groomer's skill level may fall into any of the four categories for which he will have to apply for certification: C class or beginner, B class, A class and finally Teacher/Trainer Class. The training duration, tuition fee as well as the certification fee or examination fee are given as follows.

Training and Licensing Fees:

C Class (Beginner)

Training Duration: 4-6 Months
Tuition Fee: NT$ 1,500-2,500
Certification Fee: US $130

B Class (Intermediate)

Training Duration: 4-6 Months
Tuition Fee: NT$ 1,500-2,500
Certification Fee: US$ 260

A Class (Expert)

Training Duration: 1-2 Years
Tuition Fee: NT$ 3,000-6,000
Certification Fee: US$ 390

For Teacher/Trainer Class

Must pass two breeds, no formal classes offered
Certification Fee: US$ 390 + US$130
(Examination Fee plus certificate issuance fee in case the applicant passes the examination)

Examinees pose with their ungroomed model dogs before the start of the examination. Poodles and Bichon Frises are the acceptable model dogs.

Once the signal is given, examinees must work as fast and as precisely as they could to make the grade.

In the Taiwanese system, an individual may sign up for the Class C Examination with or without formal training from one of the recognized grooming schools. Since the test is an assessment test of skills, one only needs to show that he or she possesses the required skills of a C-class groomer during the examination. Of course, since the task has become so specialized, it is best to go through formal training with one of the schools. This training may last from four to six months and the tuition fee may cost the applicant anywhere from NT$ 1,500 to NT$ 2,500.

The C-class examinees must pose their model dogs (finished or unfinished) at the end of the designated grooming period for the examiner/judge to check the grooming of the dogs.

The top scoring examinees in the C-class and B- Class in one of the annual examination/competitions in Taiwan with their trophies, ribbons, model dogs and the four Japanese grooming masters who served as examinees/competition judges

A hopeful contestant in an international grooming competition with his miniature poodle almost done to perfection

Once a groomer gets his C-class certificate, he or she can already start preparing for the B-class certification and if he or she passes this, move onwards to earn an A-class license. Those who would like to teach grooming professionally or would like to start a grooming school, will have to work on getting a Trainer/Teacher Certificate.

The examinations are given twice a year and these examinations also serve as the venue for the competition among examinees and the grooming schools where they came from. Following prescribed grooming certification rules, those that pass are announced after the examination and the top examinees are awarded. Points are also accumulated by grooming schools based on the cumulative placements of their individual student examinees and the one that gets the most points get to be pronounced as the winning school.

While such examinations represent the basic competition scenario, there are still other types of grooming competitions at the national as well as international levels. The categories also differ from the basic show style to the creative, oftentimes outlandish styles.

Grooming has indeed come of age. It is no longer a DIY activity but has morphed into one of the newest cottage industry fueled by the increasing interest of consumers for the need to pamper their pets, specifically dogs.

Is the Philippines ready for grooming competitions?

2017 SHBEAP 3rd Nationals and 6th Specialty Show

On June 3, 2017, The Siberian Husky Breeders and Exhibitors Association of the Philippines, Inc. held its 3rd National Show, and 6th Specialty show with Paul Willhauck and Wendy Willhauck from the USA. There were 44 Siberian Huskies entered in the specialty shows, as well as the All Breed shows the following day.

Mr. Paul Willhauck began in dogs in 1964. As a professional handler, he finished many top-winning dogs for his clients. He also handled his own champion Siberian Huskies, and later, along with his wife Wendy, their homebred, specialty winning and group placing Alaskan Malamutes. He is a 40- year member of the Siberian Husky Club of America, a past president of the Hockamock Kennel Club, and holds numerous other club affiliations.

For years a leader in the Alaskan Malamute fancy, Mrs. Wendy Willhauck found her breed of choice with the legendary "mother of the Malamutes," Eva Seeley. She was already exhibiting group and specialty winning Alaskan Malamutes and Siberian Huskies when she married Siberian Husky breeder and professional handler Paul Willhauck. Approved to judge in 1993, Mrs. Willhauck has twice judged at Westminster, and has also judged in various other countries..

source: https://www.acvd.org/pages/category.asp?ids=25_Alopecia_X

source: https://www.petmd.com/dog/conditions/skin/c_dg_alopecia

The said condition may not be caused by a single causative agent but rather of a combination of several diseases. It is said that obesity, hormonal imbalances, genetics and allergies are several factors that may bring about Alopecia X. This makes diagnosis and treatment a little tedious as several tests may be needed to get to a more definitive diagnosis and then be given a treatment regimen that should somehow work for your dog.

Alopecia is the medical term for hair loss partial or complete in areas where hair is normally present. Alopecia X appears bilaterally symmetrical, meaning it appears evenly on both sides of the body. The hair falls out and the skin darkens. Dogs will have a normal hair coat as puppies; affected dogs will gradually have thinning hair on the back of the hind legs and along the top of the back. Eventually, the hair loss will typically appear under the tail, on the belly and the genital area. Usually, the hair loss and hyperpigmentation (skin darkening) will appear when the dog is in its early adult stage, at around three (3) years of age. In some cases, the puppy coat is retained giving it a woolly appearance.

As mentioned earlier, diagnosis and treatment will be a process. There is no one test that will tell you that your pet is afflicted with Alopecia X. Getting a detailed history that would include genetics will be important. Blood chemistry and hormone tests including one for the thyroid will be done. As for treatment, it is a step-by-step process that will require patience. As you go through every step of the testing process and treating whatever comes along the way, always remember that shotgun treatments will have repercussions, so, it will always be better to work alongside your veterinarian, cooperate and comply.

You paid a lot to get a purebred, so why go for cheap papers?

There is a reason why you pay a premium for your dog's papers. They certify the lineage of your dog and trace its medical history, both helpful in improving its breed or its chances at competitions. Besides, the papers are your dog's passport to being recognized and registered abroad.

Purebred dogs deserve only PCCI papers.
